Wednesday, April 6 (continued)

2:00 - 3:45 p.m.

Concurrent Facilitated Discussions

The social determinants of health, disparities/inequities, and racism have a profound impact on health status. What is behavioral health’s role in promoting health and social equity? Where does prevention fit in? How do we partner with coalitions that are addressing disparities and promoting social justice and equity? These sessions are designed to identify what we individually and collectively need to learn to be able to be effective participants in the work to achieve social justice and health/behavioral health equity.

- Advocacy – Balboa 1 & 2, 5th Floor
How does the behavioral health field and its providers engage in activism and collaborate in social justice/health equity movements? What do they do? What do they contribute? What is needed to facilitate activism within the field?
- Clinical Practice – Balboa 3 & 4, 5th Floor
How does the behavioral health field and its providers apply a social justice and health equity lens to clinical practice? What are the implications for macro, mezzo, and micro level practice? How do you prepare the field to address the unconscious bias, internalized and horizontal oppression, and other attitudinal barriers within the field?
- Prevention – Gaslamp 4& 5, 4th Floor
How does the behavioral health field engage in the work of prevention across a continuum to include community engagement, community planning, health education, public policy, etc.? What emerges from the body of knowledge that can inform the content and the process of social justice work?

About The College

The College for Behavioral Health Leadership has decades of expertise in enhancing leadership in the mental health and substance use prevention and treatment fields. Our members are recognized experts and thought leaders in behavioral health. Through them, we offer a distinctive focus on fostering leadership and are recognized for our unique ability to scan the eco-system, convene leaders, and incubate new ideas to bring about change for the future. Our mission is to leverage this experience and serve as a convener of diverse leaders from across the spectrum of the health care system to identify and address opportunities for improvement and change for people of all cultures, contribute to the evolution of health and wellness, and promote leadership development and succession. Learn more at leaders4health.org.

About Prevention Institute

Prevention Institute is a non-profit, national center dedicated to improving community health and well-being by building momentum for effective primary prevention. Primary prevention means taking action to build resilience and prevent problems before they occur. Prevention strategies can be effective in preventing and reducing severity of some mental health conditions, such as depression and post-traumatic stress disorder. Further, good prevention strategies can delay onset and support treatment outcomes for those with mental health conditions. The Institute's work is characterized by a strong commitment to community participation and promotion of equitable health outcomes among all social and economic groups.
